The salient characteristic of this mania claims Thomas Wiseman in his book The Money Motive Random House 1974 is the bestowal of one's love on something nonliving; it is the deflection of eros from a human object to an inanimate one. And who is the archetypal collector? Freud described him as miserly, pedantic, stubborn, and obsessively tidy. Can these characterizations be true? Can the child's seemingly harmless stamp collection actually be the object of deflected eros? Can the reckless speculator who has just dropped a bundle on a Captain Video lunch pail be gripped by parsimony? Has the former sportsman who has taken to spending his precious weekends at auctions gone pedantic on us?	By Marilyn Bethany	TX 677948	1981-04-30
